Called Land of the Leopard National Park, this marked a major effort to save the world's rarest cat. Extending nearly 650,000 acres it includes all of the Amur leopard's breeding areas and about 60 percent of the critically endangered cat's remaining habitat. The park is also home to 10 endangered Amur tigers. WWF lobbied for the establishment of this park in the Russian Far East since 2001.
