Most of Thinking in Pictures is either an account of Grandin's own special journey or advice for parents with children diagnosed with ASD. She concludes the book with a chapter presenting her views on religion. She was brought up as an Episcopalian, but she doesn't seem to be a member of any church or devotee of any particular religion. She thinks of "God" as an "ordering force" in the universe and she thinks of religions as providing moral guidance. She has some interesting comments about ...

Visual thinking, also called visual/spatial learning or picture thinking is the phenomenon of thinking through visual processing. Visual thinking has been described as seeing words as a series of pictures. It is common in approximately 60–65% of the general population. "Real picture thinkers", those who use visual thinking almost to the exclusion of other kinds of thinking, make up a smaller percentage of the population. Research by child development theorist Linda Kreger ...

"Thinking in Pictures" immediately hooks the reader into reading the book. When my teacher introduced the options for the book I was intrigued by the title so I decided to read it. I found the title very fitting for the style considering the first part of the book is dedicated to visual thinking. This was the most fascinating part of the book in my opinion. I really enjoyed this portion of ...
